hey there -- are you read in on project liberty?

"Steven Allison" <"[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:52:29 PM +00:00

ID:8057429497

Not to a high degree. I spoke with external counsel 1.5 weeks ago and generally know the game plan by reading docs that were shared with me

"Tera Randall" <"[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:52:52 PM +00:00

got it -- so you know about Epic Direct Payments on ios/ Android

"Steven Allison" <"[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:52:59 PM +00:00

ID:8057429450

Yes

"Steven Allison" <"[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:53:29 PM +00:00

ID:8057429454

Still as an additional payment option with cheaper prices on those platforms?

"Tera Randall" <"[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:53:36 PM +00:00

ID:8057429424

correct

I am working on two reactive q's for Marc Petit in case devs have questions

"Tera Randall" <"[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:54:02 PM +00:00

1. When can we use the Epic Direct Payments system? Answer: Not now, but we're looking into it. 2. Is Epic Games planning to launch a store on iOS and Android? Answer: We don't have an update on our specific plans.

do those answers generally feel right to you? Marc wanted to make sure you're aligned.

On EGS we allow anyone to use their own payments or use ours - we took that decision last q4 so that context is important for all execs to understand.

Yes, understood

That was purposeful by Tim laying the tracks for this moment - pretty sure.

"Steven Allison" <[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack> 8/11/2020 10:56:29 PM +00:00

We've had one partner opt to take advantage of it here Wizards of the Coast on Magic the Gathering (so you have that info)

Those questions and answers feel fine - we have said a bit more definitively in the past that it is our intent or desire to launch a competing mobile store. So as long as the answer to question 2 does pull out further ?s to folks like Marc like "but Tim has said publicly that Epic intends/wants to launch an EGS Mobile store"...prep them to expect that likely immediate follow up question and just stay the course v getting tripped up trying to acknowledge that we have said things publicly any value in them acknowledging that upfront? Something like: We've expressed publicly that we're exploring options but we don't have an update on our specific plans.

I think that's better because of fairly recent stories like this:

We expect our pc store partners to come at us with questions more in context of "wtf are you guys doing?" which we will just deflect politely.

"Tera Randall" <[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack"> 8/11/2020 11:04:23 PM +00:00

It's a blast, but really on the edge pushing at times...are you going to send out a company wide guide on what to say and who to defer to/check in with before things go out?

"Tera Randall" <[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack"> 8/11/2020 11:09:38 PM +00:00

Tim is emailing the company and deferring any/ all q's to MattW

"Tera Randall" <[REDACTED]@epicgames.com"@Slack"> 8/11/2020 11:09:56 PM +00:00

and it will have light guidance that basically says don't engage... at all
